

Ever been frustrated by trying to look at a field in a Browse window that's longer than 78 characters? This is particularly easy to run into if you append a text report to a single field table to browse before printing - the totals column on the right side of the report always seems to run off the screen.

You end up pressing the End key to look at the rightmost characters in a single record, but this is totally unsatisfactory when scanning through the whole file.

Here's how to handle this situation. Remember that you can move a window off the visible screen - so grab the title bar and slide the window to the left so that the first ten or twenty characters aren't visible anymore. Then, resize the Browse window from the righthand side, dragging the border to the right edge of the screen. You'll be able to view another 75 plus characters of the field with judicious positioning of the window.
